So excited were the people by this murder, that they demanded the reorganization of the Vigilance Committee, which existed four years since, and which was a terror to the dens which exist in that city. During the day of the murder and the following day 3,000 people enrolled themselves on the Vigilance Committee books, and bound themselves ready to execute the will of the people. This Committee held meetings every day, and on the 18th of May it was determined by them to take possession of Casey and a man named Cora who had also committed murder some months before but who had not been executed, to try them and if guilty hang them. All the members of the Committee, who were re spectable merchants and residents of San Francisco, were armed and organized as a military company, some on horseback and some on foot.

The whole neighborhood about the block embrac ing the Jail was completely appropriated by spectators, long before the arrival of the troops, but at their approach room was made for them, and the armed force at once went to work and cleared away the lookers on and drew up the different companies, so that they commanded the entire square. A deputation of the Committee was delegated to call at the door of the jail and request the Sheriff to place them in possession of the prisoner, Casey. On arriving at the door, three raps were made, upon which Sheriff Scannell from the inside opened the wicket, and Mr. Myers F. Truett, on behalf of the Committee, informed the officers of their errand, and wished the prisoner handcuffed and delivered to them at the jail door. Without any hesitation the Sheriff repaired to the cell of the prisoner and informed him that the Vigilance Committee were waiting at the door and demanded his person, and that he was compelled to yield him up; and that they wished him to be handcuffed. Casey was delivered up by the Sheriff, who saw it handcuffed from the jail in a carriage to the room of the Vigilance Committee. After securing Casey ing the crew of the French ship Eugene. as above, the Committee proceeded back to the Jail and renewed their demand for Cora.
